

Internal Medicine

Jeffrey Dennis, DVM
Diplomate American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine

Dogs and cats with difficult or complicated medical problems find comfort and care at VSEC. Our internists offer the most advanced diagnostic and therapeutic services to pets with diseases affecting the heart, lungs, gastrointestinal tract, urogenital tract, and circulatory system.

If your pet is suffering from an infection, injury, toxicity, immune dysfunction, or cancer, our internists have the training and experience to identify these conditions quickly. Special radiographic procedures, blood testing, ultrasound examination, endoscopy, and biopsy procedures are just a few of the diagnostic techniques at their disposal to diagnose your pet's illness.

Lisa Cellio, DVM
Resident, American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine

Timely treatment of your pet's illness will ensure that your pet has the best opportunity to regain his or her health. Intravenous fluid support, nutritional support and specific medical treatments are available to treat your pet. A dedicated and compassionate nursing staff ensures that your pet is comfortable. Communication with both you and your family veterinarian concerning your pet's health status and future plans are always considered a priority at VSEC. 🐾

Your pet is given every opportunity to regain his or her health utilizing timely treatments, intensive care, nutritional support and even cancer therapy.